They say that behind every great man is a great woman. Well, none of these women stood behind their husbands; they stood right alongside them, and, in some cases, in front of them. While researching for The Traitor's Wife, my novel on Benedict and Peggy Arnold and their attempt to end the American Revolution, I discovered that there was much more to the infamous tale than just one man's ...

The most recent book I've had the pleasure of receiving, reading and reviewing is my second book and 'best seller' by author Sylvia Barbara Soberton called, "Great Ladies" - The Forgotten Tudor Witnesses to the Lives of Tudor Queen. The first, if you recall, was "The Forgotten Tudor Women". There has been a great deal written about Tudor queens, but less so about those women who ...

Women and the Great Hunger (Quinnipiac University Press and Cork University Press, 2017) utilises new perspectives to examine how women both suffered and shaped events in Ireland after 1845. The book opens with a chapter on Cecil Woodham-Smith and her classic account of the Famine, The Great Hunger, which was published in 1962 to great international critical acclaim and commercial success.

When the 18-year-old Gertrude Janeway got married, the year was 1927 and the US Civil War had been over for 62 years. Her new husband was an 81-year-old Union Army veteran named John Janeway. To make the match even stranger, the couple had waited three years to get hitched, since Gertrude's mother refused to sign the papers required for a 15-year-old to marry.
